Big Sur land sale cheered by some, feared by others

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE TRUST for Public Land and the United States Forest Service announced their intention this week to purchase 460 acres of the 1,100-acre Chapman Ranch in Big Sur, pleasing environmentalists but angering a handful of residents who fear the government is buying up, and thereby destroying, their community.

The Big Sur Multi Agency Facility, located at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, will host a public meeting Dec. 5 from 6 to 8 p.m. to discuss the possible purchase of the ranch, offering residents an opportunity to sound off about the transaction.

Also known as Rancho Calera, the Chapman Ranch is located off the Old Coast Road, about 15 miles south of Carmel.

Its proximity to public lands and a private residential neighborhood makes it an ideal candidate to serve as the latest epicenter in the ongoing and often heated Big Sur land use debate.

A purchase price for the acquisition has not been set as officials await an appraisal. The 460 acres consist of four separate parcels.

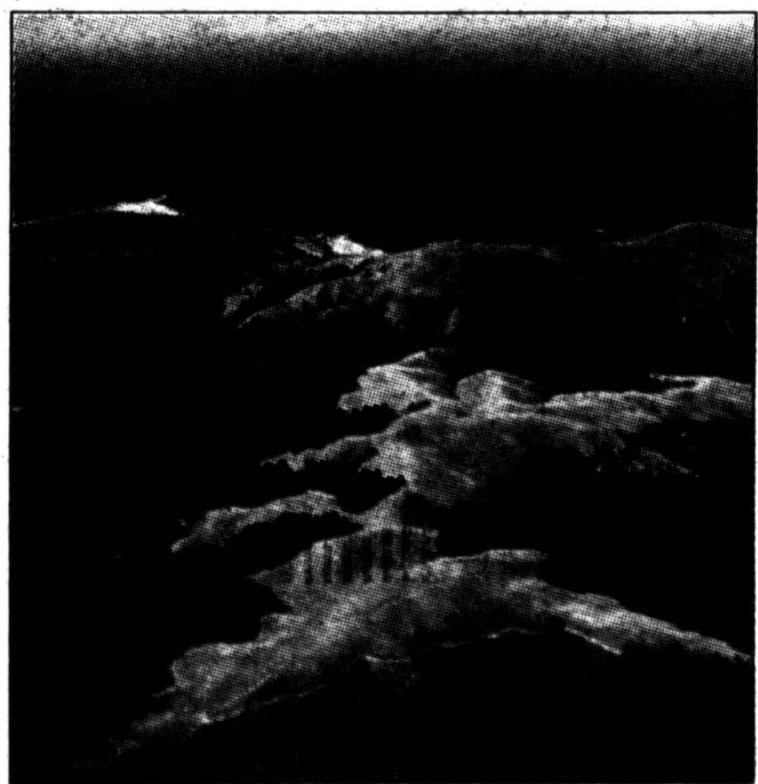

Reed Holderman, executive director of the non-profit Trust for Public Land in California, believes the public acquisition of the parcels makes sense.

"The protection of these properties will provide important trail connections, enabling hikers to access public lands from the mountains to the coast, and experience firsthand the incredible views afforded by the dramatic Big Sur scenery," he explained. "The purchase of this property will link Brazil Ranch with the Ventana Wilderness to the east via Mill Creek Preserve, creating a 10-mile corridor of public lands from the crest of the Santa Lucia Mountains to the sea below."

Holderman said the acquisition focused on parcels that provide public access and habitat protection. He added that the parcels also contain valuable natural resources.

"Condors are known to roost there, and bobcat and mountain lion have been spotted on the property as well," he said. "Rancho Calera is part of the Sierra Creek watershed, which supports threatened steelhead populations and feeds directly into the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary."

A local real estate firm, Mid Coast Investments, uses photos like this one to advertise Chapman Ranch parcels at $2.5 million apiece.

Bring in the reinforcements!

Army wife's 'extraordinary' life

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL RESIDENT Jacky Cagwin was newly wed when she and Army Lieutenant Lee Cagwin moved to Pearl Harbor in 1941. "It was going to be a great honeymoon — until the 7th of December," she said.

On the eve of Pearl Harbor Day 65 years later, the energetic, bespectacled Cagwin is a widow and the newly published author of a memoir, "Extraordinary Life of an Army Wife."

She never anticipated sharing her memories with many, but after her husband died in 2004, Cagwin rented out her home near Carmel High School and

Water project will be first since 95-10

By KELLY NIX

CONSTRUCTION CREWS are expected to break ground next week on the first project to augment the Monterey Peninsula's water supply and eliminate illegal pumping from the Carmel River.

The aquifer storage and recovery project, a collaboration between the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and California American Water Co., involves diverting excess winter flows from the Carmel River into wells in Seaside for recovery in the summer, when water is in greater demand.

The project could yield up to 2,400 acre-feet of water per year during heavy rain between December and May, but is expected to average 900 acre-feet, according to the water district.

"It's not a complete solution," said MPWMD project manager Henrietta Stern. "But it's a first step."

The ASR project will help prevent steelhead trout from being stranded in low areas of the river and restore some habitat for the protected California red-legged frog. It will also help replenish the overdrafted Seaside Basin.

Although one well, the Santa Margarita test well, is already being used, crews will construct a second well to allow for injection and extraction of water at about 800 feet below the ground.

"We are excited to go beyond the test stage," said Michelle Knight, chair of the MPWMD board of directors. "One of our problems isn't lack of water, but lack of storage, and this is a solution to it."

The diverted water in the ASR system will be treated to potable drinking water standards and pumped six miles through Cal Am's distribution system to the Seaside Basin, where the water will be injected into special wells for later recovery during dry periods.

"When summer rolls around, we will be able to

CITY SEEKS APPLICANTS TO FILL COUNCIL SEAT

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL City Council, at a special meeting Wednesday, nearly voted on a replacement for Erik Bethel, who left this week to start a new job in China. But after councilman Mike Cunningham and several speakers worried the quick appointment would limit public participation, members instead decided to accept applications until Dec. 14 and vote Dec. 19 on the person to serve the remainder Bethel's term, which ends in April 2008.

The council also had the option of calling for a special election, but Mayor Sue McCloud and Mayor Pro-Tem Paula Hazdovac recommended appointment, since a public vote would cost an estimated $8,500 and could not be held until May 2007.

"If we were to go to an election, the best case would give someone 11 months to serve," Hazdovac said. To fill a vacancy, state law requires appointing a replacement or calling for an election "within 30 days from the commencement of the vacancy," but the vote could not be held until 114 days later so candidates would have time to campaign.

Carmel Chamber of Commerce CEO Monta Potter wondered why the council called a last-minute special meeting to make such an important decision, with the already scheduled December meeting less than a week away.

"At your regular meeting, more people could be here," she said, to which McCloud responded, "We're trying to move forward with all deliberate speed."

Cunningham favored appointment over election but said the process should allow for maximum public participation.

"We want it to embody as much of the spirit of an election as we can," he said, by allowing time for people to apply and possibly selecting someone similar to Bethel. "It's the idea of trying to reflect the will of the voters as they expressed it in April 2004."

In the weeks since Bethel announced his impending departure, councilman Gerard Rose said he heard from and referred "several very well-qualified people" to McCloud, as she and the vice mayor field applications and interview candidates for appointments to all boards, commissions and committees.

The chosen one

As soon as the council unanimously agreed on appointment rather than election, McCloud announced she and Hazdovac had already made a choice and were ready to name their nominee. The mayor reported eight people inquired and three people sub-

Board calls for more expert opinions on 'historic' homes

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SEVERAL PROPERTY owners hoping to convince the historic resources board their homes are not important to Carmel's past left city hall disappointed last week, while a few with modern houses celebrated their success.

Chairman Julie Wendt wasn't willing to free any of the seven buildings on last week's agenda from mandatory preservation. But the full board granted three appeals, while denying two and putting off two others.

At the Nov. 20 meeting, members said they hoped additional study of a century-old house might turn up further evidence why it should be preserved, and they also asked for more information on old stone houses to see if an 84-year-old home built of Carmel stone is particularly special.

They denied removal of a San Antonio house from the inventory of historic properties because its designer apprenticed under Frank Lloyd Wright and it was his sole Carmel project.

A tie vote meant Marcia Green's home — which the board said was so unusual its style could not be identified, and which underwent months of repairs after a huge city-owned pine tree fell through its roof during winter storms almost three years ago — remains on the list.

The only successful appellants were the owners of three modern homes in a San Antonio Avenue complex designed by Jon Konigshofer. The move followed similar city council decisions last month and in July that two other Konigshofer homes are not historically significant.

Creative methods, resistant seedlings to reforest parts of P.G.

By KELLY NIX

THE CITY of Pacific Grove is using new methods, including planting pitch-canker-resistant seedlings, to reforest parts of the city.

As part of a $65,000 contract approved by city council members Nov. 6., tree crews will remove 48 dead trees in and around George Washington Park. A new method will be used to replace those trees.

"After we remove the dead trees, we will do pruning maintenance for about a month," said Celia Martinez, Pacific Grove's public works supervisor. "Then we will plant a significant amount of seedlings."

The seedlings, provided by the Pebble Beach Co. for about $2 each, are resistant to pitch canker, a fungal disease which showed up in the local Monterey pine population in the 1990s. The pathogen produces airborne spores that are carried to other trees by wind and insects. It has killed thousands of local pines but hasn't proved to be the catastrophe biologists once thought.

Seedlings and bigger trees

According to the city's plan, about 300 seedlings will be planted along Alder Street between Sinex Avenue and Short Street, Martinez said.

"We will also plant some larger trees at Alder and Sinex, because that's an area where there are a lot of people and seedlings would probably get trampled," she said.

The city is also going to use another method it borrowed from a landscaping technique used at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. The method involves spreading pine chips on areas where

Rock 'n' roll Christmas in Carmel

BUDDY HOLLY (also known as Travis Poelle) and the rest of the cast of Pacific Repertory Theatre's "Twist and Shout Tribute Concert" will help ring in the holiday season at the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's Christmas tree lighting Friday, Dec. 1. The tunes will begin at 4 p.m. in Devendorf Park at Ocean Avenue and Junipero Street, followed at 4:30 by the arrival of Santa Claus — escorted by his friends from Carmel Fire Department — and other live performances at 5. Children and adults alike will be entertained by Myles Williams and PacRep's Stephen Moorer reciting "Twas the Night Before Christmas," in a typically engaging, theatrical manner. The Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross and the Carmel Chamber of Commerce will provide refreshments. For more information, call (831) 620-2000.

Plaza open house, extended hours

THE NEWLY remodeled Carmel Plaza will celebrate the holiday season and its new tenants by hosting an open house following the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's tree lighting Friday, Dec. 1, and keeping its shops open longer every day until Christmas.

Immediately after the Carmel tree is lit, the Plaza, located just half a block away, will welcome everyone into its courtyard to continue the celebration with live music, food, gifts from retailers and complimentary wine provided by Robert Mondavi.

And in a continuing nod to the needs of busy holiday shoppers, the Plaza will provide a little more time for evening perusing. On Black Friday — the day after Thanksgiving, commonly considered one of the year's busiest shopping days and significant to retailers hoping the winter buying season will put them "in the black" — the center's shops began staying open later.

Through Christmas Eve (in order to provide for last-minute purchases), Carmel Plaza will be open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. The concierge center will be open to field consumers' questions and give gift advice.

Organizers also said they hope the added hours will encourage people to spend locally rather than shop on the Internet.

Crossroads fundraiser to snap portraits of pets and their owners

TO HELP raise money, the nonprofit Animal Friends Rescue Project will be taking photographic portraits of pets and their human counterparts. A photographer will be present Dec. 1-3 at 149 Crossroads Blvd. in the Crossroads Shopping Village. For $30, pet owners will get a photo CD for holiday cards, prints, calendars and memories. All pets are welcome and walk-ins are encouraged. The AFRP, which relies on support through donations, is dedicated to finding good, permanent homes for abandoned, stray and abused animals. # From tiki torches to dead poets, Inns of Distinction Tour has it all

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HOLIDAY MERRYMAKING will take a tropical twist at the Tradewinds Carmel, one of nine properties stunningly decorated, brimming with food and drink, and opened to the public from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 3, for the heritage society's annual self-guided Inns of Distinction Tour.

"We are going to feature entertainment with contemporary and ancient traditional South Pacific hula dancing," reported Tradewinds owner Susan Stilwell, with the contemporary Auana and ancient traditional Kahiko hulas performed by Na Wahine O'ili Ili Kahakai. "Our garden will be beautiful, with the stream, fire pit and tiki torches lit." Tradewinds Carmel is located at Mission Street and Third Avenue.

Each of the nine inns on the tour, which is a major fundraiser for the Carmel Heritage Society, will provide food from a fine Carmel restaurant and wine from a Monterey County vintner. In addition, tour participants may enter drawings for an overnight stay at one of the inns and dinner for two at a Carmel restaurant. Nine prizes will be awarded.

In addition to Tradewinds Carmel, the tour will include:

- the small Carmel Country Inn. Located at Dolores and Third and set among quaint houses a few blocks from the downtown commercial district, it "conveys the comfort and moved to Maryland, where she enrolled in a memory writing class at the local senior center.

WIFE

"Since I had never written anything more than a thank-you note, I didn't realize the words would just fall out of my head, and I remembered," she told The Pine Cone.

She intended to share the stories only with her family. "I wanted them to know about their grandfather, who was a prominent artist here in Carmel," she said of her dad, Carmel Art Association cofounder Howard E. Smith. "And I also wanted them to know what it was like to be at Pearl Harbor," as well as how the young couple lived on $128 per month.

"The next thing I knew, I was writing a book with all the events of my life and of my husband's life, and of my children," Cagwin said.

Born in Rockport, Mass., she traveled west to Carmel several times a year with her family before moving to the Peninsula in 1935 at the age of 13.

Eight years later, she met Leland Cagwin, a native

Pennsylvanian and West Point graduate, at a cocktail party. They wed two weeks later, on May 11, 1941.

Recollections of her early days as an Army wife, the terrifying Day of Infamy at Pearl Harbor that awoke the nation to the dangers of fascism, and the births of their three children between World War II and the Korean War, poured onto the pages of her little notebook, which she filled with pencil scratch.

She remembered the smell of the ship fires sparked by Japanese bombers, and the sight of an enemy pilot's face as his plane flew so low it clipped the tree in her front yard. She recalled pointing a pistol at a man who tried to climb onto their bus in a convoy slowly moving out in the dead of night.

"It floated out of my mind," she said. "That's crazy, because I don't know how to write. I'm not a writer; I'm not a good story teller."

But her Maryland classmates clearly disagreed.

"After they heard me recite the chapters I had written, they felt I should put them into book form," she said.

She returned to Carmel, and longtime friend Kay Prime "took my scribbles and typed them out," Cagwin said. "And when it was typed out, my daughter felt it should be on a computer, and she showed me how to use a computer."

Still uncertain of her manuscript's merits, she mailed it to surviving members of her husband's Army division, and their praise pushed her to proceed.

Park Place Publications in Pacific Grove printed 250 copies, many of which have already been sold. The back of the paperback's cover reads, "Jacky Cagwin is the daughter of a prominent artist, and what starts out as a memoir for her family develops very quickly into the adventures of a young girl as she describes her debutante party, marriage to a young West Point graduate (later Major General), and their worldly travels to exotic places, meeting famous politicians, Hollywood stars and prominent world players. She survives the bombing of Pearl Harbor and the trauma of losing a child, helps with the war effort, raises three children, lives in Halie Selassie's Ethiopia and goes on safari. Her life's story is full of adventure, insights and tender moments. A worthy read of a worthy woman's life."

Anyone interested in obtaining a copy of the $20 book should write to P.O. Box 221516, Carmel, CA 93923, but Cagwin also suggested people put pen to paper themselves.

"I recommend it to everybody to write a book, or a good memoir for your grandchildren or members of your family, mostly for a record you lived here on this earth," she said. "Also, it's the most therapeutic thing I have ever done. After losing my husband, it eased the pain of losing him after being married 63 years."

Farmland conservancy opposes desal plan

By KELLY NIX

A GROUP of Monterey County farmers has challenged a proposal by California American Water Co. to build a desalination facility in Moss Landing, contending it would impact the group's water rights.

The Monterey County Agricultural and Historical Land Conservancy, which owns about 15,000 acres in Salinas Valley, opposes a Cal Am plan to use beach wells to provide a water source for the Monterey Peninsula.

"This proposal will adversely affect and damage our groundwater rights and supplies, and worsen seawater intrusion beneath our protected farmlands," the Nov. 6 letter states.

State parks prepares to remove felled trees

By CHRIS COUNTS

STATE PARKS officials are not sure exactly how they will remove dozens of felled eucalyptus trees from a gully adjacent to a landmark Big Sur waterfall, but they are confident they can complete the task without damaging sensitive slopes.

"I've met with several tree contractors, and they feel it's something they can do," explained Tom Moss, California State Parks senior environmental scientist.

Just three weeks ago, a decision by the California Coastal Commission paved the way for state parks to restart work on a controversial landscape maintenance project at Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park.

The coastal commission, by a unanimous vote, denied an appeal by Big Sur resident Joseph Schoendorf and a group called the Friends of the Big Sur Coast contesting a decision by Monterey County to authorize the removal of 4,516 non-native trees and plants — including 358 eucalyptus trees — near environmentally sensitive habitat and on slopes exceeding 30 percent.

The trees were cut down two years ago, but they were never removed and now mar one of the California Coast's best known scenic vistas. State parks officials said the legal action by the project's opponents halted their plan to remove the trees.

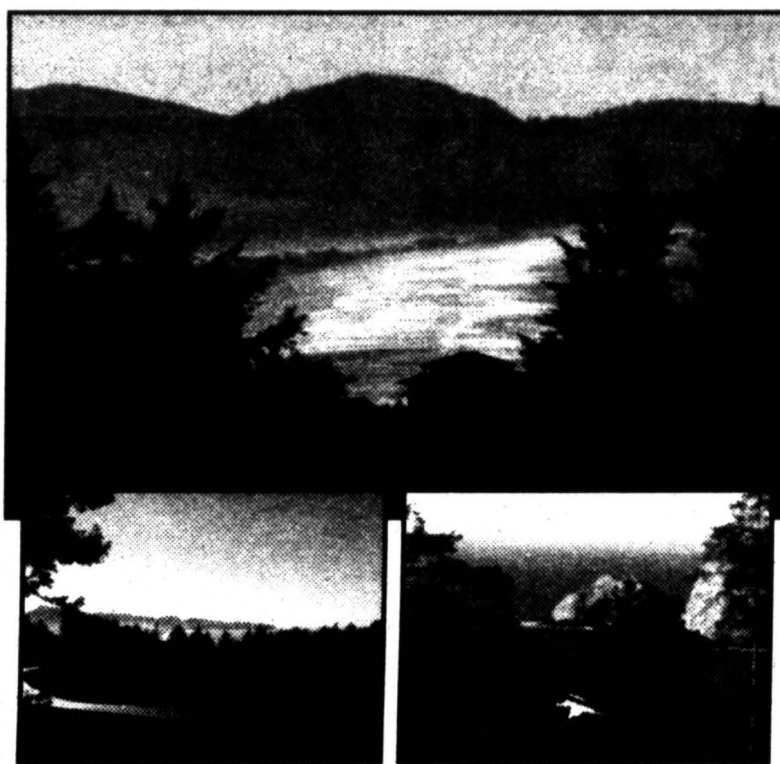

Agency seeks contractor, neighbor insists on oversight

State parks officials hope to restart work on the project as soon as they decide on a contractor, said Dave Schaechtele, a spokesperson for the agency. Once the trees are removed, the slopes will be replanted with native vegetation.

"We're ready to put the native plants in," Schaechtele said. Meanwhile, Moss said his agency will keep a close eye on any work that is done.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Connors, R.N.

WHO WOULD MAKE DECISIONS FOR YOU?

A durable power of attorney for health care, otherwise known as a health-care proxy, involves the selection of an adult by a patient to be his or her decision-maker for all health concerns if and when the patient becomes incapacitated. In most states, if a proxy is not designed, power over health decisions is automatically granted to spouses or parents in the event that an individual were to become incapacitated. Surprisingly, many individuals do not believe that this would be the best choice. In fact, one survey reveals that a third of married people indicate that they would rather have someone other than their spouses as proxies. This shows the importance of designating a healthcare proxy yourself.

Without a health care proxy, your doctor may be required to provide you with medical treatment that you would have refused if you were able to do so. For example, your doctor may be required to provide you with artificial nutrition and hydration, a respirator, or CPR, even though you are in a coma with no hope of recovery, or are terminally ill. VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES provide care in all types of settings — at home, in residential care, or a skilled nursing environment.

P.S. Female relatives are more likely to be chosen as health-care proxies than male relatives.

The conservancy's opposition marks the first public opposition to underground desal technology, touted by many environmentalists and the California Coastal Commission as much less harmful to marine life than drawing water from open ocean intakes.

The land conservancy's letter is among about 45 sent to the California Public Utilities Commission during a 30-day public comment period for an environmental impact report for Cal Am's Coastal Water Project. The PUC will decide whether concerns brought up in the letters will be included in its environmental impact report on the project.

Catherine Bowie, Cal Am community relations manager, declined to comment on specifics of the land conservancy's letter. "I think it's all a matter for the consultant for the PUC to analyze when they produce our environmental impact report," she said.

According to the letter, the group contends Cal Am would illegally be taking water, since it has no water rights to Salinas Valley aquifers. The conservancy cites several legal rulings it says shows "no water is [legally] available to new appropriators from overdrafted groundwater basins."

Overdrafting occurs when more groundwater is being pumped out of an aquifer than is naturally replaced, or recharged.

The conservancy's managing director, Brian Rianda, didn't return phone messages left by The Pine Cone. Marc del Piero, a trustee with the group, said he was not authorized to talk about the letter but did question Cal Am's entitlement to the groundwater.

"The question is: Does Cal Am have water rights there?" said del Piero, who also works for Pajaro/Sunny Mesa, a company competing with Cal Am to build a desalination facility in Moss Landing.

By drawing water for its desal plant from beach wells, Cal Am might take some water from aquifers, raising legal issues in the Salinas Valley.

But Bowie said it's possible Cal Am might be able to drill wells laterally, taking water from underneath the ocean, eliminating the issue of water rights.

Ongoing opposition from environmentalists

In its letter to the PUC, the land conservancy requested the EIR evaluate several issues surrounding underground wells, including a study on the effects of the wells on adjacent properties, and an analysis of all other proposed desalination projects in Moss Landing.

According to its website, the land conservancy was formed in 1984 and owns more than 15,000 acres of farmlands and agricultural conservation easements, "including overlying groundwater rights in the Salinas Valley."

Cal Am wants to build a desalination facility at the Moss Landing power plant, which would provide the Peninsula with more than 11,000 acre-feet of water per year, enough to replace pumping from the Carmel River. The desal facility would use the power plant's intake and outfall units to withdraw and discharge water.

But the plan faces ongoing opposition from environmentalists and the coastal commission who contend the once-through cooling systems should be eliminated because of damage to marine organisms.

As an alternative, Cal Am has proposed using beach wells to draw seawater for desalination. That method would not use once-through cooling.

The coastal commission and Surfrider Foundation have urged Cal Am to explore the use of underground technology for desalination. The method involves installing pipes and wells below the ocean's floor. Water is pumped through sand which acts as a vast filter.

"With underground intakes," Joe Geever, Surfrider Foundation's Southern California regional manager, told The Pine Cone in August, "you completely eliminate marine life mortality, which is a huge hurdle for ocean desalination."

The land conservancy's concerns are joined by others sent to the PUC. Eric Zigas, senior project manager for Environmental Science Associates, the consultant performing the EIR for the PUC, said its received about 45 individual comment letters about Cal Am's Coastal Water Project.

"There is a lot of discussions about alternatives [to the Coastal Water Project]," Zigas said.

Included in those who chimed in, Zigas said, are the coastal commission, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, NOAA, the Marina Coast Water District and PBS&J, an engineering firm proposing using ships for desalination.

"Within the week or two weeks, we will post all of the comments and the notes," Zigas said.

The comment letters can be seen at www.cwp-eir.com, a website established by the PUC for the review of the Coastal Water Project.

Cal Am, water district try to bury the faucet

By KELLY NIX

THERE WERE no group hugs, but the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and California American Water Co. — two entities that have often clashed — had a first-ever meeting this week to “develop a more respectful and effective relationship.”

In what at times sounded like a marriage counseling session, the touchy-feely meeting Thursday afternoon drew Cal Am general manager Steve Leonard, three MPWMD public outreach committee board members and water district general manager Dave Berger.

“I think we need to have this discussion,” Leonard said, “so our relationship is defined by us and not a third party.”

The meeting, organized by MPWMD’s public outreach committee, was an effort to foster a more benevolent partnership, said Michelle Knight, board chair.

“It’s not a new goal,” Knight said. “It’s something we have been working on for about three years.”

The two entities, the MPWMD (a regulatory body) and Cal Am (a private water company) have often battled. But the height of their contempt for each other occurred during a legal battle over groundwater rights in the Seaside Basin.

Thursday’s meeting to begin the healing process went well. They got along — mostly. But like any marriage, tiffs happened.

There was a danger the seemingly affable meeting would sour when director Alvin Edwards brought up issues about local water projects and questioned what he said was Cal Am’s constant leadership changes.

“I would prefer to talk about things that will improve the relationship,” Leonard said. “I don’t mean to be rude, but I think it’s off topic.” The two men didn’t kiss and make up, but they moved on.

Leonard, who did most of the talking, suggested board members learn more about Cal Am’s operations and how it delivers water to its 40,000 customers. He even suggested a field trip that would include a visit to the silted-up San Clemente Dam in Carmel Valley.

“I would like to get the directors out to see what it takes to move a drop of water from Seaside to Carmel,” Leonard said.

The Cal Am manager also said he would like to see more people at the board meetings so they can find out, first hand, what is going on within the district.

“Their window of this relationship is often through the press,” he said. “The truth of the matter is, [the press] is not always accurate.”

Both entities seemed to agree Thursday their job is to provide water.

“We have a common set of constituents. Everything we do, good and bad, affects the same group of people,” Leonard said.

Safeway celebrates with charity, freebies

TREES

"We're going to be looking over their shoulder," Moss said. "All precautions necessary will be taken when the trees are removed to avoid erosion. We will put a variety of conditions on the contract to ensure the area will be cleaned up in the most environmentally sensitive way."

Opponents critical of removal plan
Schoendorf, though, doesn't believe the state parks plan goes far enough to ensure protection for the sensitive slopes.

"State parks is responsible for the existing situation, not a contractor," Schoendorf countered. "As the initial permit approver, the Monterey County Planning Department must look over both state parks and any cleanup contractor's shoulders. Now is the time for the county to step up and assure that state parks' actions will not make matters worse."

To ensure the sensitive slopes are protected, Schoendorf would like to see a more specific plan detailing exactly how state parks will remove the trees.

"Friends of the Big Sur Coast wants the area cleaned up and restored as soon as possible, but we need to know how the downed trees will be removed," said Schoendorf, who lives just north of the park. "A hastily formulated cleanup plan will only exacerbate the situation."

romance of a country home," according to the heritage society, complete with fireplaces in every room.

■ The canine-friendly, recently expanded, beautiful Spanish-style Cypress Inn at Lincoln and Seventh was constructed in 1929 and is co-owned by animal-lover Doris Day. The inn is particularly known for its afternoon tea for people and pets alike — though Fido's tray is served on the floor, not the table. Cypress Inn is also the chosen site for post-election festivities every two years and was the first in town to obtain a permit for live music in the restaurant, after the council decided last year to lift a ban imposed in 1939.

■ Hofsas House attracts passersby with its whimsical, Bavarian looks, but the magnificent ocean views from its hillside perch make them want to stay day after day. Constructed a half century ago, the eye-catching inn presents a storybook picture of Carmel in its gateway location at San Carlos and Fourth.

■ The Horizon Inn, Tradewinds Carmel's neighbor at Junipero and Third, always appears striking and offers contemporary "Carmel charm and comfort," according to tour organizers.

■ One of the grand ladies of Carmel, La Playa Hotel, at Camino Real and Eighth, boasts a phenomenal garden and charming restaurant, in addition to lovely rooms and ocean views. The Mediterranean-style hotel was originally built more than a century ago as a residence but became a home away from home for fortunate guests beginning in 1912.

■ Located a stone's throw from the source of the city's quirky laws and regulations — as well as the logical ones — the Monte Verde Inn on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues was built in 1900, long before the church across the street became Carmel City Hall. The French provincial inn's rooms boast ocean views and fireplaces, and it's located mere feet from the town's main shopping street.

■ The Tally Ho Inn, Monte Verde and Sixth, was also recently remodeled but continues to offer "a true English countryside atmosphere," according to the heritage society. "Flower-filled decks, patios and views create a natural setting that promises to refresh and relax."

■ Vagabond's House Inn, located at Dolores and Fourth, is "a charming brick and half-timbered English Tudor country inn." Built in the late 1930s, the inn was a favorite spot of poet and author Don Blanding, whose literary contributions, including his 1928 book, "The Vagabond's House," were widely read. In 1936, he wrote a column entitled, "From a Window in Vagabond's House" for The Carmel Pine Cone, which later devoted a special edition to him.

Inns of Distinction Tour tickets, available at the First Murphy House at Lincoln and Sixth, are $25 in advance and $30 the day of the tour. For credit card orders, call (831) 624-4447. ple of a type, period or method of construction, and does not possess high artistic values," according to assistant planner Nathan Schmidt, who recommended the home be removed from the inventory.

The owner agreed and said hours of research revealed nothing to indicate the house is significant, though consultant Kent Seavey's report labeled it "eclectic" and "a good representative example of early residential housing design in Carmel."

"It's painted yellow and has some nice plants, but that doesn't make it significant," Yateman said. She also said remodeling changed its appearance, though Schmidt disagreed integrity was an issue.

"This house is really a mishmash, and not something I would see as being considered rare or unique or special," HRB member Erik Dyar commented. "The only thing is its age, but age to me and the code does not mean it's historic."

But a home predating Carmel's incorporation should receive "the benefit of the doubt," according to Wendt, who asked if Seavey could review the property again and beef up his argument for its preservation.

Dyar wondered how long that might take, and senior planner Sean Conroy said Seavey mostly "stood by his original reports" and declined to provide additional information when asked in the past to revamp them.

Wendt asked if the HRB would support having another historian look at the house. Dyar agreed because of the building's age, and Erling Lagerholm also voted to have the home reevaluated. The newest board member, Elinor Laiolo, dissented.

His only house

Rowen Maiden is best known for helping design Nepenthe restaurant in Big Sur, according to a report by consultant Richard Janick. And Virginia Hayes' San Antonio Avenue house, also designed by Maiden, constitutes "an excellent example of post-World War II San Francisco Bay Area Regionalist design by a former apprentice of Frank Lloyd Wright."

However, no city documents prove Maiden designed the house, argued attorney Jim Heisinger, though Conroy said a "House Beautiful" article credited him.

"We're fortunate enough in Carmel to have an actual Frank Lloyd Wright house," Heisinger said. "I don't know that we should put a house that might have been designed by a student of his on the same level."

But the fact Hayes' home was Maiden's only Carmel project weighed heavily with the board.

And without study by an expert supporting the point, Wendt hesitated to conclude Maiden or his creations are not historically significant.

"We don't really have substantial evidence," she said. "The appellant has not submitted a report by an architectural historian."

Only Laiolo, who remembered how the house looked before its carport was enclosed to become a garage, voted in favor of the appeal, saying that construction altered the look and feel of the small house.

House of stone

Stonemason John Arnot built Darwin and Geraldine Barrett's Monte Verde Street home in 1922, according to Seavey's study, and it should be preserved because it is "one of the

JOHN D. WALDROUP

July 1, 1926 - Nov. 17, 2006

Carmel / John D. Waldroup, 80, passed away Nov. 17 surrounded by his family.

Mr. Waldroup was born July 1, 1926 in Hayesville, North Carolina, where he grew up on a farm. In 1945, he graduated from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill as president of his class. Upon passing his CPA exam, he worked for Price Waterhouse in Manila, in the Philippines, where he married his former wife, May Waldroup. In 1962, he moved the family to Japan, opening an office for Arthur Young and Co. as a partner of the firm. He traveled extensively in his career and also established an office in Seoul, Korea.

After 20 years of living abroad, Mr. Waldroup returned to the United States and resided in the Carmel area for more than 36 years. During this time he embarked on a new career as the developer and owner of the Barnyard Shopping Center in Carmel, which he managed until 1993, when his son Marc took over until the shopping center was sold in 2004.

Although Mr. Waldroup spent most of his life away from North Carolina, he still loved the state where he was born. Over the years he purchased land near Durham and Chapel Hill and in the early 1990's his first son, Michael, started to work on commercially developing this property. In 2004, the first phase of development was completed.

Mr. Waldroup loved the outdoors and he was an enthusiastic tennis player. He also enjoyed reading and listening to classical music and hymns. His family was very important to him and he was especially proud of his six granddaughters.

Mr. Waldroup will be greatly missed by his family and friends. He will be remembered for his generosity, positive attitude, and love of life.

Mr. Waldroup is survived by his beloved life partner, Gerd Jensen, his former wife May Waldroup of Carmel, his children Michael Waldroup of Durham, North Carolina, Kristin Ramsden of Sebastopol, California, and Marc Waldroup of Corral De Tierra, California. He also leaves behind his sister Kate Peyton of Houston, Texas, and six granddaughters Whitney and Robin Waldroup, Thalia, Marika, and Kaelyn Ramsden, and Samantha Waldroup.

A private funeral has been held. A memorial service will take place on December 30th, 2006, at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made to the Asthma Foundation or the Alzheimer's Association.

earliest examples of Carmel stone residential construction in the village."

But Schmidt said city documents describing locally important people make no mention of Arnot, and building materials alone don't make the home, which is "of no particular style," historic.

Wendt wanted to know how many other homes constructed of Carmel stone are as old.

"There are a lot of Carmel stone houses, but they are not true Carmel stone, nor do they date to 1922," she said.

And though the city attorney and city administrator more than a year ago decided appellants can't be required to hire consultants to determine the historical importance of their homes, Wendt again objected to basing decisions on information provided by anyone else.

"Staff is trying to make a determination that should be made by an architectural historian," she said. "The appellant does not have a professional's opinion, and that bothers me."

Board members are not experts, either, she said. "We should be looking at architectural historians' reports."

Conroy said the board's role is to make decisions based on whatever information they have.

"If you think being a stone house from 1922 is strong enough to keep it on the inventory, the board should vote that way," he said. "I think this board is certainly capable of making a determination."

After a tie vote on removing the house from the list, Conroy said he could provide additional information on other Arnot buildings and Carmel stone homes to help board members decide the fate of the Barretts' house. The HRB unanimously voted to continue their appeal.

The tree house

"I love my home, and I'm extremely proud of it," Marcia Green told the board. "It's historically important to us — the Wood family [its original owners] and me — but why it's important to the City of Carmel, we haven't figured out yet."

In his survey, Seavey identified the home as "Northern European vernacular" in style and said it qualifies "as an excellent and unaltered example of the creative and independent residential housing design found in Carmel between 1903 and 1940."

But Green and Conroy pointed out most of Green's house, located at Guadalupe and Third, was built in 1946. Also, city documents don't include Northern European vernacular as a notable style.

Conroy said repairs of area damaged by a falling pine might have compromised the home's integrity, since the original materials were lost.

Wendt disagreed with Conroy's recommendation to grant the appeal and said the home's uniqueness fits with "Carmel's pronounced taste for individualism."

"This house is so unique that staff is unable to identify any other resource on the inventory that's similar," she said.

Lagerholm sided with Conroy, but Wendt countered, "No substantial evidence has been provided, since we don't have an architectural historian arguing it is not historic."

Ultimately, the board voted 2-2 on Green's appeal, which left the house on the list. She can either hire a consultant and come before the board again with new information, appeal to the city council or wait until the city finds someone to fill the board's vacant seat.

When Green asked when that might be, Wendt answered, "No one wants to fall on that grenade."

Sand and Sea free

Modern designer Jon Konigshofer was better known for the inexpensive construction methods of his houses than their architectural traits, and is therefore not historically significant, the Carmel City Council decided when it granted appeals in July and November. Anticipating similar actions if it denied appeals filed by the owners of three other Konigshofer houses, the HRB voted 3-1 to remove them from the inventory. Individually owned by Gwendolyn Metz, Margaret Kim, and David and Mary Liskin, the houses were built in 1941 as part of the Sand and Sea development on San Antonio Avenue.

Conroy said the board should consider the council's actions when debating the appeals, and he also concluded the homes do "not appear to be particularly important, or unique examples of the second Bay Area Tradition" of modern architecture.

While consultant Meta Bunse outlined reasons neither Konigshofer nor his Sand and Sea houses should be considered significant, Wendt said consultant Anthony Kirk referred to them in "glowing terms" and called the complex "a fine example" of modern architecture. She also argued Bunse is outnumbered by historians who believe Konigshofer was significant, but Dyar objected to using "ratios" of various opinions and said denying the appeals would be useless.

"I find it hard to make the applicants go through the appeal process when there's the inevitability of the city council restating the decision they already made," he said. With the exception of Wendt, the board agreed.

Marcia Green's house needed extensive repairs after it was karate chopped by a large Monterey pine during a 2004 storm. The HRB couldn't decide if it was historic.

Carmel artist creates a map as cute and complex as its subject

By CHRIS COUNTS

WORLD RENOWNED for its sandy beach, its affection for dogs and its aversion to street lights, Carmel is also becoming known for the works of artist and mapmaker Lisa Bryan.

Two editions of Bryan's creative and colorful "treasure

This detail from a new Carmel map shows one of the 1,200 Lisa Bryan water colors that give the map local color.

'Buddy' benefits Ag Against Hunger

PACREP THEATER'S beloved "The Buddy Holly Story" returns to the stage of the Golden Bough Playhouse in downtown Carmel in a special matinee Sunday, Dec. 3, to raise funds for Ag Against Hunger. Tickets run $35-$45, with pre-show wine tasting and hors d'oeuvres available for an additional minimum donation of $10. Doors open at 1 p.m.; show begins at 2. For more information and to reserve tickets, call Ag Against Hunger at (831) 755-1480.

maps" — packed with interesting local tidbits and decorated with whimsical illustrations — have long charmed locals and visitors. Now Bryan is back with a "new and improved" third edition of the map — one the artist believes is the pinnacle of her mapmaking creativity.

"I've learned a few things along the way," she told The Pine Cone. "This is the jewel in my mapmaking crown."

Born in England and raised in Vancouver, B.C., Bryan lived in Hong Kong and Hawaii before settling in Carmel about 30 years ago.

"I love this town," Bryan declared. "It suits me."

Like many Carmelites, Bryan has also traveled extensively. On her journeys, she often wished she could find a map that would be informative and serve as a work of art.

"Paris and London have maps with cute little pictures in them," she said. "But I've never seen anything like my map of Carmel."

The detail on Bryan's new 22-inch-by-28-inch map dwarfs that of her two previous efforts. To create the minute cityscapes that decorate it, she reduced more than 1,200 of her own watercolor paintings of varying shapes and dimensions. The effect is impressive. And it promises to be long-lasting: The maps will be printed on synthetic paper Bryan calls "indestructible."

In addition to the map, which features an event calendar on its reverse side, the ambitious Bryan is also releasing "Carmel: A Treasure by the Sea," a two-year calendar and history book. A copy of Bryan's new map is incorporated into the book, which is filled with fascinating local tidbits, including a previously unpublished Robinson Jeffers poem, drawings by artist Jo Mora and a "signed" sketch by Bryan of Clint Eastwood.

The calendar and book will be available at local book shops, gift galleries, real estate offices and inns.

■ Pint-sized art a big hit with holiday shoppers

The increasing popularity of miniature art is best exemplified the flurry of local art shows dedicated to pint-sized paintings. And nobody's been doing it longer than the Carmel Art Association.

"We started started doing miniatures in 1927," explained art association director Susan Klusmire.

California Hall of Fame inducts Eastwood

GOVERNOR ARNOLD Schwarzenegger and his wife, Maria Shriver, will preside over a stately induction ceremony this week at the opening of the California Hall of Fame. Former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood will join the likes of President Ronald Reagan, Walt Disney, Frank Gehry, Cesar Chavez, John Muir and the Hearst family as inaugural inductees into the hall.

The ceremony will take place Dec. 6 at the California History Museum, 10th and O Streets in Sacramento.

According to the museum, the honorees are, "extraordinary Californians who have made a lasting impact on history."

The permanent hall of fame exhibit will comprise more than 100 historic and original items representing the lives and legacies the inductees.

"A California Hall of Fame is long over due," said Shriver, who came up with the idea of creating the hall. "Inductees share a common characteristic: They dreamed, they built, they organized and they soared so that the world would never be the same."

Eastwood has been in Japan getting ready for the opening of his second Iwo Jima movie, which tells the story of the bloody invasion of the tiny, but strategically vital, island from the Japanese point of view. That movie, "Letters from Iwo Jima," follows the October opening of "Flags of Our Fathers," which is considered a favorite to win several Oscars next year.

Classical quartet, Irish trio highlight Sunset weekend

ONE OF the most distinguished ensembles in chamber music, the Fine Arts Quartet, performs at Sunset Center Friday, Dec. 1, at 8 p.m. Founded in 1946, the quartet's current line-up features Ralph Evans and Efim Boico on violin, Yuri Gandelman on viola and Wolfgang Laufer on cello. Each year, the quartet tours worldwide, with concerts in such musical centers as New York, London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, Madrid, Moscow, Tokyo, Beijing, Istanbul, Jerusalem, Mexico City, Toronto and, of course, Carmel.

Sunset Center also hosts a "Christmas from Dublin" concert by the Irish Tenors Saturday, Dec. 2, at 8 p.m. The acclaimed trio, composed of singers Brian Dunphy, Ciaran Nagle and Anthony Norton, will present a collection of holiday favorites, including "Little Drummer Boy," "Silent Night," "Saviour's Day" and "O Holy Night." ## How to make a holiday toast without sounding like a drunken fool

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

ALTHOUGH I'M not exactly the picture of composure, I strive for a Miss Manners-like knowledge of etiquette whenever possible. In my 33 years, I've learned that during this weird window of time between Thanksgiving and New Year's Eve, the probability for uncomfortable social situations skyrockets. Restraining yourself from smooching your coworker crush at the holiday work party. Getting the gift just right for the Pollyanna (and keeping it under $20). Testing your mingle-ability at a nudgy neighbor's annual tree-lighting. Calming the pre-wedding panic of a friend who decided to get hitched in the midst of holiday mayhem. Egads.

If there is one thing that will keep you up at night and make your palms sweat, it is the thought of having to give the perfect toast. This time of year, you can pretty much plan on being put on the spot at one social gathering or another. Coming up with just the right words to say isn't exactly rocket science, but it does require some forethought. Follow a few simple tips, and you'll have the savoir faire to make a toast you, and everyone else, will be proud of. As a woman who tends to learn by making a complete laughing stock of herself, here are some tried and true tips to get it right:

1. At any event, the host should be the first person to make a toast. As much as I enjoy being the COA (center of attention), when playing the role of the grateful guest, it's important to follow protocol. Be sure to ask the host permission prior to the event to give a toast, and don't place mouth to microphone until after the host has clearly signed off.

2. Unless your toast is completely off the cuff, brainstorm ideas early and rehearse what you plan to say. Don't worry about memorizing every last word of the speech — using notes is perfectly acceptable, as long as you also make regular eye contact with the crowd, and smile.

3. Keep your speech short and sweet. Make your toast one or two minutes maximum and it will be more memorable (and for all the right reasons).

4. Spare your audience any unnecessary B.S. and make sure your toast is sincere and from the heart. Choose words, sentiments, and stories that truly reflect how you feel about the person you're toasting.

5. Try to start your toast off with a joke, a funny story or an amusing anecdote. But if being funny doesn't come naturally, you can play it serious and still pull off a fabulous toast.

Confidence is ultimately the key to successful public speaking, no matter how you decide to spin it.

6. Remember, a toast is supposed to be a tribute to the subject of the toast, not an opportunity to steal the spotlight. Be sure to focus your remarks on the recipient of the toast and, however tempting it may be, steer away from indulging in an all-about-me moment.

7. If you've ... ahem ... overindulged, save face and keep your lips sealed and your bum firmly planted in your seat. There's absolutely nothing wrong with having fun at a festive holiday party; it's just better to let someone else do the honors instead of looking like a lush in front of a captive audience. Been there. Done that.

Fairgrounds brings winter to sunny Peninsula

WISHING YOU were spending the holidays in Wisconsin or Vermont? For the second year in a row, the county fairgrounds is hosting Monterey On Ice, providing sun-drenched Monterey Peninsula residents with a healthy dose of what winter can be like in the rest of the country.

The ice rink is open daily from Thanksgiving Day through New Year's Day.

Adults can skate for $12, while children are admitted for $10. Prices include skate rentals.

For more information, call (831) 915-9831 or visit www.montereyonice.com.

Ventana Vineyards holiday open house

AN AFTERNOON among the screaming toddlers at Target during peak holiday shopping season can be enough to send any sane gift-giver to a state of semi-insanity. But the fine folks at Ventana Vineyards are offering a way to relieve holiday stress and do your shopping without going online or to the mall. Their very first Holiday Open House, Sunday, Dec. 10, will feature gift wines (is there anything better to have on hand than a bottle of Monterey County wine for impromptu gifting?) and plenty of merchandise, including comfy logo outerwear, gourmet spreads, goodies and more. Plus, in the spirit of the holidays, Ventana is taking half off all shipping for all purchases. Also, winemaker Doug Meador will be on hand to personalize the bottles. With Tarp's Roadhouse right next door for refueling, I foresee

Sunday being a very productive shopping day for many people.

Details: Dec. 10, from noon to 4 p.m. at Ventana Vineyards tasting room, 2999 Monterey-Salinas Highway. For more information, visit www.ventanawines.com or call (831) 372-7415.

Cal Am may delay C.V. project until after the holidays

CALIFORNIA AMERICAN Water officials met with Carmel Valley business representatives this week after locals complained a water-main replacement project on Carmel Valley Road could deter holiday shoppers from visiting Carmel Valley Village.

In response to complaints, construction on Carmel Valley Road between Scarlett and Rancho Fiesta roads was stopped last week after just one day. The project — which is one phase of a much larger project aiming to replace 23 miles of water main — was scheduled to be completed by Christmas.

The meeting, attended by Cal Am general manager Steve Leonard and Cal Am engineer Armand Gonzales, was hosted by the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce.

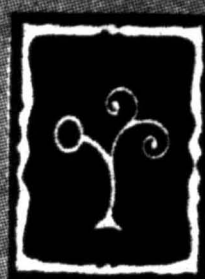

Cal Am community relations representative Catherine Bowie said the water company is preparing a response to concerns voiced at the meeting. Bowie said Cal Am has been asked to delay the project until after Christmas, but the water company has not decided what to do. According to Bowie, leaks in the main, which was installed in the 1930s, could pose a serious risk.

"If the pipe breaks and the hillside goes, we're talking about disrupted service and all sorts of other consequences," Bowie explained. "At the end of the day, Cal Am is responsible. We need to meet our obligations."

With 23 miles of water main needing replacement, Carmel Valley residents will likely be experiencing road delays for years.

"It has to happen," said Bowie of the work on the water main. "The good news is that once it's done, [Carmel Valley residents] won't have to see us for 50 years."

ART

The nonprofit will host an opening reception and holiday party for its 79th miniature show Saturday, Dec. 2, from 6 to 8 p.m. The exhibit will feature works from many of the art association's longtime members, including Barbara Johnson, Alicia Meheen, Jan Wagstaff and Keith Lindberg of Carmel, Bill Stone and Hilda Northrop of Pacific Grove, and Miguel Domínguez of Marina.

"There is so much nice work in this show," Klusmire said. "The prices are affordable. They make wonderful gifts."

In addition to the miniatures show, two longtime art association members — Heidi Hybl and Andrea Johnson, will present exhibits of their new work.

The three shows will continue through Jan. 3. For more information, call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.org.

■ Big Sur Gallery opens sculpture garden

For the second time in just a week, a new sculpture garden will open in Carmel.

Seven days after the Cherry Center for the Arts celebrated the installation of its sculpture garden, Big Sur Gallery will unveil its Sculpture Courtyard Dec. 1.

The courtyard, which is located in the Carmel Rancho shopping center, will feature works by sculptors John Tyler, Carol Savid and Yuri Ordjonikidze.

"The sculptures are magnificent," beamed gallery owner Alice Russell. "They bring a wonderful feeling of Big Sur to the center."

That has been Russell's aim since she opened her gallery last year. The venue features the work of dozens of local artists including Big Sur's Helen Jerene, Erin Gafill, Ronna Rio Emmons and Melissa Lofton.

The gallery, which is located at 26543 Carmel Rancho Blvd., will host a reception and Christmas party Dec. 1 from 5 to 8 p.m. For more information, call (831) 624-1172 or visit www.bigsurgallery.net.

■ P.G. gallery presents annual budget art sale

For the third straight year, the Lisa Coscino Gallery tries to dispel the notion art is expensive. The works of 50 mostly local and regional artists will be presented at the gallery's annual holiday budget art show, each with the same $99.95 price tag.

"Just about every medium is represented in this show," explained Coscino. "There's fun stuff, funky stuff and beautiful stuff."

Included in the exhibit will be new works by Carmel multi-media artist Robin Winfield, Pacific Grove watercolorist Charlesie Kelly, Monterey painter Michael Snodgrass, Carmel painter Tory Raggett, Big Sur painter Chi Birmingham, Pacific Grove photographer Richard Newman, Seaside printmaker Noriko Constant and Monterey printmaker Leslie Spowart.

The gallery will host a reception Friday, Dec. 1, from 6 to 8 p.m. The show will continue through Dec. 23. For more information, call (831) 646-1939 or visit www.lisacoscino-gallery.com.

With prices as low as $10, the fair offers creative holiday gifts suited for any budget.

"Over the years, we've put a lot of attention into making sure everything is original and high quality," explained coordinator and Carmel Valley potter Jenny Klein.

The event also serves as a showcase for an eclectic collection of local artists.

Among those featured will be Carmel metal sculptor Rob Holt, Carmel Valley photographer Peter MacArthur, Carmel Valley watercolorist Mireille Barmann, Big Sur woodworker Steve Trapkus, Carmel Valley metalworker Robert Baker, Monterey photographer Vic Mitchell, Big Sur painter Celia Sanborn and Carmel Valley glassblower Nick Leonoff.

For more information, call (831) 659-0570.

■ Big Sur clinic, artists seeking angels

To help raise money for the nonprofit Big Sur Health Center, the Post Ranch Inn's Sierra Mar Restaurant is hosting a fundraising art exhibit. Local artists were asked to contribute 10-inch-by-10-inch pieces, and 41 artists responded to the task, including Greg Hawthorne, Karuna Licht, Daniel Bianchetta, Cynthia Johnson-Bianchetta, Brandham Rendlen, Lygia Chappellet, Marion Cascio, Barbara Kreitman, Rachel Fann, Kodiak Greenwood, Sarah Healy, Erik Sensika, Lorena del Campo, Bayesteh Ghaffary and Tom Davies.

This holiday season, the health center is seeking donors for its Angel program. For a minimum donation of $2,500, angels receive, among other perks, an original piece of art from the show. The donors will be supporting an institution that relies on community backing to deliver its medical services.

"The Big Sur Health Center means many things to many people," explained board member Lisa Kleissner. "But above all, it has provided a sense of security for our community for 28 years. Living in a remote area, knowing quality medical care is not far away is of particular importance for families, employees, senior citizens and visitors."

The restaurant, perched on a steep ridge overlooking 30 miles of coastline, provides a remarkable setting for displaying art. The venue is open for viewing by the public every day from noon to 3 p.m.

The exhibit will be on display through December. For more information about the Angel program, call (831) 667-0282 or send an e-mail to: info@bigsurhealthcenter.org.

■ Galleries stay open late for art walk

Youth musicians make merry

Youth Music Monterey — the nonprofit "dedicated to providing high-caliber music education and performance opportunities to the youth of Monterey County" by bringing together more than 120 young performers of all ages and backgrounds from 36 schools — will present its Holiday Concert Wednesday, Dec. 6, in Sherwood Hall in Salinas.

The youth and honors orchestras, conducted by John Larry Granger, will perform holiday songs, including "Sleigh Ride" by Leroy Anderson, "Hanukkah Celebration," "White Christmas," the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "Messiah" and "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," and will also lead the audience in sing-along.

VACANCY

mitted applications, though Hazdovac said she thought only one person had.

[After the meeting, McCloud said four people submitted their names: Olof Dahlstrand, Maggie Hardy, Steve Dallas and Ken Talmage.]

Rose questioned the legality, since state law requires appointment after the vacancy begins, and Bethel's official last day as a council member was to be Nov. 30, according to his resignation letter. The council took a break to call city attorney Don Freeman at home and ask for his interpretation.

Because Bethel left the country Nov. 27, the council could proceed, according to Freeman, and McCloud argued for immediate appointment of the nominee — whom she did not name — so the person could participate in the Dec. 5 meeting.

"We should have a full complement for the appeals on Tuesday, in fairness to the community and anyone whose project is coming before us," she said.

But Cunningham preferred holding the Dec. 5 meeting with an incomplete council to give candidates more time to apply.

"There's a chance there are two or three more out there, maybe more, and it's possible one of them may be better suited," he said.

McCloud said she and Hazdovac spent two weeks working on their selection, and Rose asked her to name the person, but Hazdovac said she didn't want to proceed without some assurance the vote would be unanimous in the appointee's favor.

"I think it would be harmful," she said, if the council split on the issue.

When McCloud opened the floor for public comment, former Mayor Jean Grace said appointment made sense, but not the process. She and former councilwoman Barbara Livingston suggested advertising to let the public know about the vacancy.

"The information coming out of city hall has been inconsistent in terms of the process," commented cafe owner and chamber of commerce board member Maria Murray, who said she received conflicting information regarding applying for the appointment. "I don't believe everyone who's interested in this position has come forward, and I feel very uncomfortable with how this is going forward."

Former Carmel Residents Association President Sherry Shollenbarger said an open process would engender goodwill between citizens and city hall.

Cunningham said news coverage would likely generate more applications, but Hazdovac said, "An article is not good enough," and the city should advertise in the newspaper.

Council members voted to advertise, accept applications until close of business Dec. 14, and hold a special meeting at 4:30 p.m. Dec. 19 to appoint Bethel's replacement. For information, visit city hall or call (831) 620-2000.

take water from those wells and put it right back into that pipeline for Cal Am to deliver to its customers," Oliver said.

While some light construction will begin next week, crews are expected to begin drilling the second well in January, said Joe Oliver, MPWMD's senior hydrogeologist.

Although the ASR project will only provide a fraction of the Peninsula's water needs, it marks the first water supply alternative to come to fruition since a 1995 state order that pumping from the Carmel River be drastically curtailed. Cal Am is also seeking to build the Coastal Water Project, which includes a desalination plant in Moss Landing. Another water provider, Pajaro/Sunny Mesa Community Services District, has also proposed a desalination plant in Moss Landing. But both of those projects are years from being implemented.

"Literally, this is the first project," Knight said of the ASR.

A number of permits were needed for the ASR project, including a City of Seaside use permit and one from the U.S. Army for land rights. But the MPWMD is still awaiting a crucial water rights permit that would allow Cal Am to divert water from the Carmel River to the wells.

"The state has given us a temporary permit but it's constrained in time and quantity of water," Knight said. "If we had the [new] permit, we could pump any time of the year and as much as we could, as long as the flow requirements are met and wildlife isn't affected."

The long-term permit is still being contemplated by the California Department of Fish and Game and the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's fisheries service, Knight said.

"We are just so frustrated that NOAA and fish and game are fighting us," she said. "This project is really for the benefit of the river."

It's hoped that by the time the new ASR well is completed in February, the permit will have been granted, she said.

FLUID SITUATIONS

If you see collections of fluid beneath your vehicle, place a clean newspaper under your car and leave it for the night. In the morning, carefully pull the newspaper from beneath the car, and note the location, color, and amount of each leak. The most common leak consists of a brown/blackish fluid of medium consistency. This is most likely to be an engine-oil leak, which may not be serious but should be investigated. A reddish, light-brown, or black fluid that is closer to the middle of the car is likely to be transmission fluid. Reddish or light brown fluid of thinner consistency may be powersteering fluid. Note each location carefully to help the technician make a proper diagnosis. Leaks can end up impairing your vehicles performance. Please, take the leaks seriously, and if you notice a leak bring your car to our caring experts. Once we identify the source, we will discuss the problem with you, and make a quality repair. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens. We are the oldest independent repair facility in Monterey going...and growing!

P.S. Leaking transmission fluid may be indicative of a deteriorating transmission seal or gasket.

TREES

trees are desired. The chips contain shredded cones and, when watered, produce natural seedlings.

"This is something new," Martinez said. "In a few weeks you have little sprouts coming up. And in the rainy season, we will have better growth."

It takes about two years for seedlings to produce a pine tree of the size that would be sold in a 5-gallon pot, Martinez said.

The attention to the Pacific Grove's trees is long overdue. Regular maintenance hasn't been performed for about five years, while pruning hasn't been done for 10 years, Martinez said.

In November 2004, an elderly woman was killed when a pine limb fell on her in the Monarch Grove Sanctuary. The city recently settled a lawsuit with the family for $1,000,000.

The city contracted for tree removal from West Coast Arborists, Inc., which will start taking out the park's trees on Dec. 4. The company is charging the city $45 per hour for its workers, or about $1,500 a for a crew to work a full day.

Budget constraints, Martinez said, have made it difficult for the city to maintain its trees over the years.

"The crews are so lean we only respond to emergency issues," she said. "This is money that was budgeted this year for this specific project. But we don't have the money we really need."

RANCH

Locals feeling squeezed

According to Lisa Kleissner, though, the purchase is the latest in a series of transactions that spell doom for the Big Sur community.

"They already own 70 percent of the Big Sur Coast," complained Kleissner, a Big Sur resident and a board member of the Coast Property Owners Association. "Every acquisition is a nail in the coffin of the vitality of the community."

Kleissner recently attended a series of "Vision Group" meetings intended, among other things, to improve communication between local residents and government agencies. Kleissner said she was surprised the impending purchase of the Chapman Ranch never came up in the discussions.

"It's disappointing," she said. "The sessions were intended as a forum for open communication. This underscores the fact that the agencies weren't being candid."

Mike Caplin, a Big Sur resident and president of the CPOA, believes the forest service has an inherent advantage over residents, leading to the likelihood locals will ultimately be squeezed out of their Big Sur neighborhoods.

"The forest service lives forever, but people don't," Caplin said.

Nature preserve for sale

Mid Coast Investments, a local real estate firm, currently lists seven of the ranch's nine parcels — totaling more than 790 acres — for sale on its website for $2.5 million each.

If all were sold individually, they could net $17.5 million.

Mid Coast Investments describes the property as a veritable nature preserve.

"Wonderful native plants and trees grow in this private wilderness," a description on the company's website reads. "Numerous European and indigenous grasses grow on the open ridge tops of the ranch, along with native bushes and shrubs. Native oaks, madrones and chaparral grow on the upper slopes, and in the canyons below grow redwoods and bay trees. The redwood stands are superb."

Besides, the logistics — and the worry — involved in finding a qualified substitute or in taking their loved one to a care facility can be overwhelming.

We can help.

Our Home Care Coordinator will visit you to discuss your needs and wishes. Then, when the time comes, we will carefully select a Personal Attendant to be at home with your loved one while you are away, and to follow the routine that you have established. We'll do everything possible to make this temporary absence comfortable for your loved one and for you. It's worth a try, isn't it? Because you can't take good care of anyone else unless you take care of yourself.

Even the most dedicated of family caregivers periodically need some "time off" in order to replenish their energy and renew their spirits. But their commitment is so great that they have difficulty giving themselves permission to take a break.

Poodle helps launch mother-and-daughter antique shop

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

LILY P. HAWTHORNE, a 2-year-old miniature poodle, is the founder of newly opened antique and gift shop in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The store, Lily's Chance Discoveries, is owned by Francesca V. Hawthorne and Margot Petit Nichols, creator and writer of the Carmel Beach dog column, "Sandy Claws," which appears in The Pine Cone. Lily was featured in the column last December.

Nichols and Hawthorne — mother and daughter — have long dreamed of opening an antique store together. When the space in Su Vecino Court became available after the SPCA Benefit Shop moved out in October, Hawthorne jumped at the chance to occupy it. She asked Nichols to be a partner, and Lily's Chance Discoveries was born.

"That was the nicest invitation I've ever had," Nichols said. Nichols plans to continue as a staff writer for The Pine Cone and will help out in the store as needed, as will Lily.

Hawthorne, manager of the shop, has years of experience in retail management and displays visual merchandising.

After graduating from St. Helena High School in the mid-'80s, Hawthorne embarked on a 10-month trip around the world with a friend. Nichols flew to Pakistan to join her daughter for a month, during which time they traveled in Pakistan, India and Nepal. They developed a taste for Asian furniture and art objects which are featured prominently in their shop.

Hawthorne, who was born in Venice, Italy, and spent the first six years of her life there, has a great appreciation for all things European, as does her mother, who resided in Europe for 13 years.

"We love old things," Hawthorne said, "and we have gathered a nice inventory of European, English, Asian and American antiques and estate items for Lily's Chance Discoveries."

The only contemporary items in the store are handcrafted costume jewelry and Laughing Elephant books and greeting cards.

The shop is located on Lincoln between Fifth and Sixth avenues in Su Vecino Court, across from Da Giovanni Restaurant. It is open daily, except Tuesday, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

THE COUNTER-INTUITIVE IN CREDIT SCORES

Credit scores have become one of the most crucial parts of the loan qualification process. Step into a lender's office to talk about taking out a home mortgage loan and, before the coffee has even been served, your credit scores flash on the screen at the loan officer's desk.

With that in mind, you can see that it's worth making some effort to elevate your credit score if possible—and you often can. The main ingredient is the cleaning up of credit reports that hold the data crunched into credit scores. Talk with your mortgage and real estate advisors about doing this.

Also important is the realization that the assumptions behind credit scores don't always match our common sense assumptions about money. Credit cards offer a salient example. You might think that it would be best to cut down the number of credit cards you have to a bare minimum, perhaps combining existing balances on one card instead of two or three. The fact is, however, that the credit scoring program looks at how much money you can borrow on all of your cards and the percentage of that maximum that you have borrowed. If you close credit card accounts whose total allowable borrowing was, say, $30,000, and combine your debt on one remaining card with a maximum of, say, $10,000, your debt to borrowing ceiling will suffer greatly, and that will show up on your credit score.

Convinced yet? Talk to your real estate and mortgage advisors long before you set out to buy your next home—in fact, talk to them NOW—to learn how best to approach maximizing your credit score. CONSIDER THESE YEAR-END FINANCIAL TIPS

We've almost reached the end of the year. But while you've still got a few weeks left in 2006, take the time to consider some year-end financial moves.

First, see if you can make additional contributions to your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan. Since you typically make these contributions with "pre-tax" dollars, the more you contribute, the lower your taxable income.

Next, make a charitable gift. You'll be helping a good cause and you can get an immediate tax break for your contribution. Also, if you give an appreciated asset, such as stock, you'll avoid having to pay the eventual capital gains taxes when the stock is sold.

Finally, review your investment strategies to make sure they are still appropriate for your needs. A lot can change in your life over a year.

By Margot Petit Nichols

MILO JONES, 2, is a digger, jumper and a lover, not necessarily in that order. All these attributes stem from his Jack Russell lineage.

On Wednesday morning — a more than crisp, breezy sunny day with the horizon a sharp line instead of the usual hazy blur — Milo advanced on us up the Eighth Avenue sand dune. He was fresh from playing with the 8 o'clock Labrador Carmel Beach contingent and a having a welcome Malamute encounter. So many big friends, so little time.

Milo was with his mom, Marisa Mijares, who brings him to the beach every day. Sometimes he goes to work with contractor dad Robert Jones to enjoy the sound of the saw and the smell of newly cut wood.

Among his accomplishments are sitting, shaking paws and staring — mostly at his dog-food bag. Mom said Milo will do anything for food. His favorites are ice-cold watermelon and celery cut into small cubes for easy consumption. Cheetos rate high on his favorite foods list, too.

One day, Milo was arrested at the beach. He had gone there with surfer Dad but failed to stay at water's edge as most surfer dogs do. Milo wandered away and was found, unattended, by the police. They kindly took him to the slammer, where they called the number on his dog tag. Mom answered and retrieved him. No bail was posted.

There is no stuffed animal Milo cannot pull apart, according to Mom. After he removes the squeaker and stuffing, he finishes the job by tearing the material to shreds.

At night, Milo is carried up to Mom and Dad's bedroom loft, where he burrows beneath the covers to enjoy a cozy night's sleep among a comforting tangle of feet.

Your Insurance Die Before You Do?

Client Background:

Janis had purchased a $3,000,000 universal life policy in 1990; at the time of purchase she was told that she would pay 10 premiums of $23,700 and that the policy would generate enough return internally to pay the mortality charges thereafter. When we met Janis in 2004 she was still paying $23,700. In fact, when we requested an in-force ledger from the carrier we found that at the current interest rate, $23,700 would be needed each year through age 100.

Why? We moved from a world of double digit and near double digit interest rates in the 80's and 90's where illustrations were prepared at 8%, 10%, even 12%, to the real world of today with interest rates of 4% to 5%.

The Solution:

Janis had $534,185 of cash surrender value in her policy, we 1035-exchanged (tax free exchange) the policy for $6,000,000 guaranteed death benefit with a well-rated carrier for $28,280 annual premium.

Net Result:

- Double coverage for similar premium
- Fixed cost
- Guaranteed to age 100 through policy protection rider
- Guaranteed from 100 to 120 through extension rider

Actual results may vary based on client's circumstance.

A magnificent tenure

ONE HUNDRED years hence, the people of the City of Monterey will have a lot to thank Dan Albert for.

Any ordinary mayor would brag about completion of a major facility such as the Monterey Sports Center during his time in office. And his chest would rightfully swell with pride if he could also boast of (twice) saving two major military institutions from closure.

But when Dan Albert presided over his final city council meeting this week, he had something even more important to put on his 20-year list of accomplishments: The creation of the Window on the Bay Park.

Most people living in the Monterey Peninsula these days weren't even here when the waterfront from Highway 1 to Lovers Point was a semi-industrial nightmare. They have no knowledge that, as recently as 1970, active railroad tracks kept much of the shoreline off-limits to humans, Cannery Row was a decaying mess, there was no such thing as the Rec Trail, and Del Monte Avenue through downtown Monterey was effectively walled off from the ocean by a row of cheap commercial and industrial buildings.

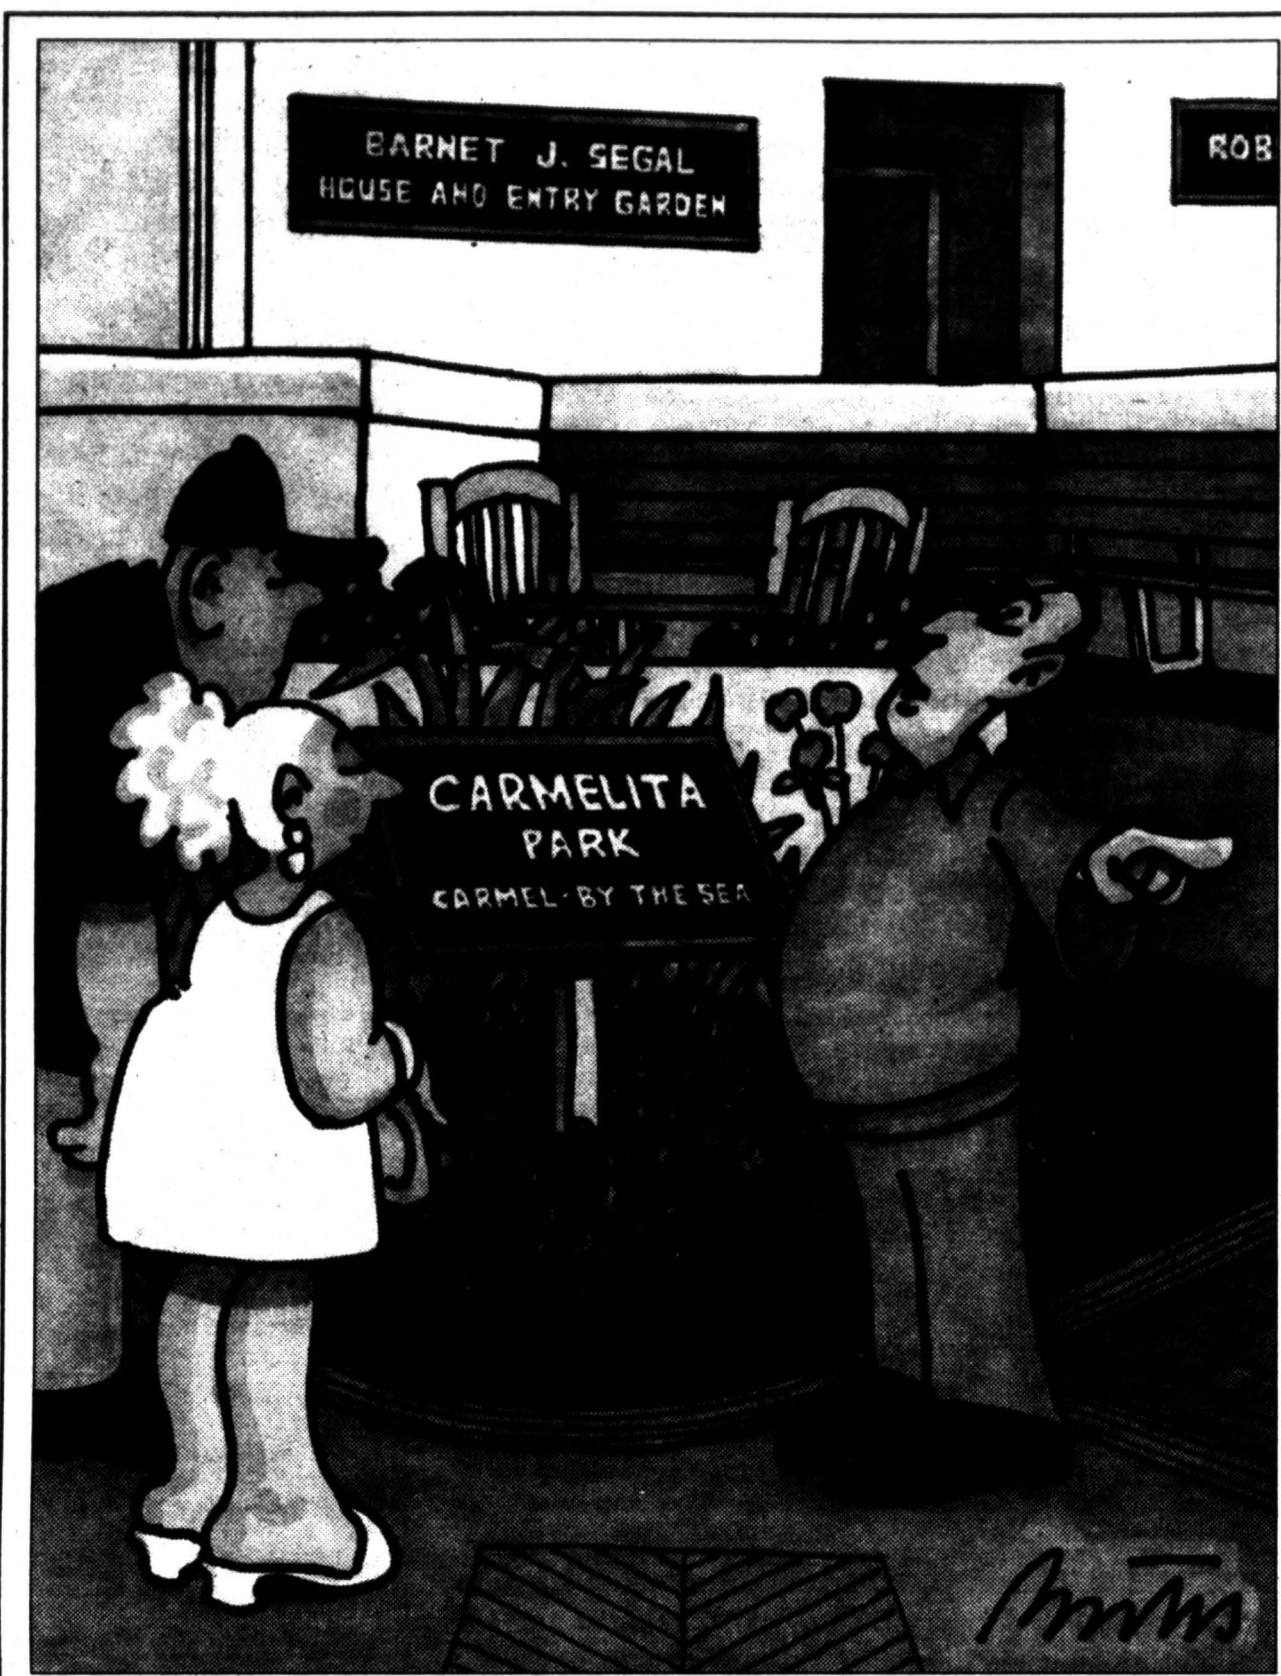

Albert can't take credit for fixing all of this. But he was definitely the prime mover and shaker behind the beautiful, grassy oceanfront park that now stretches from Fisherman's Wharf almost to the Naval Postgraduate School. Under his leadership — and with the help of numerous city council members and city staff — Monterey turned a decaying, ramshackle, urban eyesore into a sparkling, natural gem.

It's a place everyone enjoys — whether they just drive by and take in the unobstructed view of the bay, play volleyball, haul a kayak to the water's edge, or get together with their friends to hawk their political views to passing motorists.

Ironically, the city's activists get plenty of use out of Window on the Bay Park. But they haven't given Albert much credit for creating it. Through the years, they've been too busy attacking the mayor and his council allies for supposedly making "backroom deals" and favoring businesses over neighborhoods. But the people of Monterey were too smart to be taken in by such tales. They knew Albert for what he was: A mayor of the people, who cared about the future of his city above all else. That's why they elected him over and over again — by overwhelming margins. And that's also why a big crowd turned out this week at city hall to say goodbye.

Montereyans of the 22nd century and beyond will happily benefit from the accomplishments of Dan Albert, 10-term mayor. But they'll have one thing to regret. Unlike us, they will never have a chance to know Dan Albert, the man.

Letters to the Editor

Will avoid Pebble Beach

Dear Editor,

First off I would like to acknowledge the dangers of speeding and the importance of the California Highway Patrol in regards to our safety.

I use two trucks for my plastering business. Both trucks haul the same tools, scaffolding and materials from job to job. One truck has a gross vehicle weight restriction slightly over 10,000 lbs. The other truck's GVWR is slightly under 10,000 lbs. Because my larger truck has a GVWR over 10,000 lbs, I am required to obtain a Motor Carriers Permit. This permit comes with an extensive application containing questions related mainly to the interstate transporting industry.

What puzzles me is that I have been using this same size truck for the past 25 years and I have always been confident that my commercial registration and liability policy were sufficient for my operations. I have also never been confronted by local CHP over this. What really baffles me is why I was issued such a citation during an enforcement contracted for speeding concerns. The law being the law, I will have to comply, and it has become evident that the only way to avoid such excessive bureaucracy in the future is to, and with respect to its valued residents, avoid Pebble Beach roadways and focus my services on areas where vehicle enforcement is still state controlled and not privately funded.

'Cambodia will pale by comparison'

Dear Editor,

Having mirrored the left on a host of issues, Republicans needed a swift kick in the head. They spent money like there was no tomorrow. That "bridge to nowhere" said it all. Pledges of comity from Pelosi and Reid won't deter Waxman or Conyers. Soon it will be all investigations, all the time. The White House will have a difficult time staying afloat in the tsunami of subpoenas that's coming.

The only thing worse than the Congress we had is the one we're about to get. Promising the highest ethical standard in history, Nancy Pelosi is off to a great start. She pushed John Murtha as Majority Leader and was resoundingly defeated. She also considered naming an impeached federal judge as chairman of the Intelligence Committee, but strong negative reactions from both sides of the aisle finally forced her to change course.

Jane Harman, the senior Democrat on the panel, would normally take charge when her party assumes the majority. She is relatively moderate and enjoys the respect of Republicans and Democrats for her experiice with intelligence issues. The two had been allies until a few years ago, but ideological and personal animus has changed that.

Pelosi is a San Francisco liberal. Harman is more centrist. In Pelosi's eyes, Harman failed to be sufficiently tough on Bush regarding Iraq. Pelosi voted against the invasion; Harman supported it. Some say all the media attention given to Harman because of his position on the House Intelligence Committee irritated Pelosi, particularly after he became Minority Leader. Upstaging the speaker-elect can adversely affect one's career.

Democrats will push hard to withdraw from Iraq. One can argue whether we should have overthrown Saddam in the first place, but the worst thing we could do now is withdraw from Iraq and stand on its own. The killing fields of Cambodia will pale in comparison to the bloodbath that will ensue if we withdraw precipitously. Unlike in Vietnam, we didn't just swallow our pride and walk away. The Vietnamese didn't follow us here after we fled that war. The terrorists we're fighting now will. Suicide bombers are bad enough everywhere.

Warren "Pete" Poitras, Carmel Valley

Why the neglect?

Dear Editor,
We recently returned from a visit to the Carmel-Monterey area and wanted to express our deep appreciation to residents and civic leaders who help to sustain such a quality living environment.

What we experience across most of California is a haphazard sprawl that is destroying our unique natural heritage. Agricultural lands are replaced with look-alike houses and chain stores so common they are even vulgar. Our state highways are abused and neglected, littered with weeds, trash, illegal promotional signs and graffiti. Litter, graffiti and illegal signs despoil lamp posts and traffic poles, altogether visually polluting our urban landscape while sustaining a perception that the laws protecting property can be disregarded with impunity.

Apparently most Californians are oblivious as our public investment in and the character and dignity of public fixtures and thoroughfares are misused and neglected.

As appalling as this devastation is, it is rarely addressed in public. Most people seem content to live within the walls of personal residences and automobiles, venturing out occasionally to shop the malls or grocery.

Why have we allowed this abuse fortified with neglect? Left to fester it communicates a powerful message of a decaying culture where "anything goes" and "no one cares." Can we be sensitive to humanity, fine art, music and literature, yet oblivious and undaunted by blight and disorder?

Actually, each of us individually contributes to a growth in goodness or to decay. Our very own actions and inactions have created this mess!

Nearly everyone lives better, longer lives with playthings the well-to-do of a mere 50 years ago could not have imagined. Yet evidently personal wealth and comfort are paramount as individuals, groups and organizations fight or resist one another, and everybody is against somebody struggling to arrive at a safe and comfortable place.

The Carmel-Monterey area shows that embracing community codes while keeping a clean environment enhances community by improving quality of life and sense of well-being. Naturally, people feel better and treat one another with greater respect and consideration, thereby sustaining goodness.

Did you know...

The greatest land owner in Monterey in the late 1800s was David Jacks, who bestowed his name upon Jacks Peak County Park and (probably) Monterey Jack cheese. He owned much of the town for more than 50 years. The Jacks' fortune was eventually given to California colleges and universities, and to the city of Monterey in the form of Pacific House, Casa del Orio and Don Dahvee Park (the latter stemming from the name his Mexican friends and employees called him).

Introducing: CASA BELLA, Carmel

CASA BELLA: Spectacular new Carmel Mediterranean Estate rebuilt and restructured from the 1920s. The home features 4500+ square feet of exquisite luxury, built with the finest craftsmanship and materials, yet maintaining the historic significance and ambiance of a past era. The home is located in Carmel's sunny Hatton Road Estate area of large lots and prestigious homes, south of Ocean Avenue, close to town and all of Carmel's wonders. Attractiveness abounds with the original 1926 Carmel stone and stucco exterior along with the 200 year old imported Italian clay tile roof. The kitchen will delight any master chef. A formal dining room opens to a patio. Designed for gracious living the master bedroom and office/den are on the main level with 3 guest bedrooms and 2 baths on the 2nd floor. Slightly ajar. Welcoming. A glimpse of the wonder beyond. And it's been there since 1931. Captivates all who pass by. Slowly. Copied. Never duplicated. Oh! If those fine old stone walls could speak. Lightly traveled street. Quiet. Except for the sound of the sea. $5,000,000
